

A-Level French – Wider Reading list

In order to achieve success at AS & A2 Level it is important that you develop your language skills and cultural understanding outside the lessons. This study is in addition to the homework tasks which make up your extended tasks. There is a wide range of resources you can use to support your learning both in school and online.

Many of the resources listed are available, free of charge, on the internet.

Books

As well as your course texts there are some other “must read” books in French, ranging from the Asterix or Tintin comic books to classics such as St Exupéry's Le Petit Prince.

There are all sorts of lists online to tempt you but here are a couple of examples:

Relatively easy to read modern classic: L'Etranger – Albert Camus poetry: Calligrammes – Apollinaire classic novel: Le Père Goriot – Honoré de Balzac short stories: Contes de la Bécasse – Guy de Maupassant

1. “Hygiène de l’assassin” by Amélie Nothomb

This book is written almost entirely in dialogue. The story consists of different journalists interviewing a famous novelist, Prétexat Tach, who is dying. Tach, an obese, misogynistic monster of a man, is an unpleasant yet highly entertaining character. He makes a game of avoiding questions about his personal life and driving away his interviewers, among whom a contest develops to see who can dig up any interesting information on the novelist. The interactions between Tach and the interviewers make for fast and absorbing reading, and the mystery developing around Tach's past and personality will keep you glued to the page.

2. "Un soir au club" by Christian Gailly

The protagonist of this drama, Simon Nardis, is a former jazz pianist and alcoholic who had to give up both habits to stay on the straight and narrow. In a single night, he breaks with years of abstinence and returns to his two loves. Written in sharp, snappy prose, "Un soir au club" reads like hot jazz and quickly draws you in with its seductive pace. Gailly often uses short sentence fragments for emphasis, which helps direct the reader's attention to grammar and phrasing.

3. "Bonjour Tristesse" by Françoise Sagan

The plot centers on a teenage girl's relationship with her womanizing father, and how his love life influences and becomes entangled with her own. It retains the fast pacing and quick gratification of a romance novel, but reads more like a soap opera condensed into novel form, and draws you in with charisma and personality.

4. "Pietr-le-Letton" by Georges Simenon

This novel by Simenon introduces Commissaire Maigret, who appears in many more novels and stories. By many, I mean more than a hundred. So if you develop a taste for following Maigret through his methodical, character-rich investigation processes, you'll have taken on an excellent habit for your French learning. The prose in this novel is still a little rough compared to the easy, relaxed pace Simenon developed in later works, but it familiarizes you with Maigret and Simenon in a story that takes the detective through a variety of locales in different social strata.

5. "Coule la Seine" by Fred Vargas

This collection of three mystery stories is a nice sampler to get you acquainted with another French detective, Commissaire Adamsberg, who appears in several Vargas novels. Vargas is a historian who incorporates her knowledge of history into her books, creating rich, eccentric characters who have the education necessary to make her plots play out in a satisfying way. Every native English speaker learning French at some point encounters doubts as to whether what they're doing is really useful. For this reason, you may find Vargas comforting. She creates characters who are armed with unexpected facts that end up applying to real-life situations. These tendencies are not all fully explored in this collection, but you'll get an idea of Adamsberg's personality as well as the charm of the style and characters you'll find in the novels.

6. "L'Amant" by Marguerite Duras

This is a classic that is part of any basic education in French literature. Set in French colonial Vietnam, it tells the story of a young girl from a French family who becomes romantically involved with an older Chinese man. The plot is narrated from the detached point of view of a woman who is now much older and reflecting on the events related. The writing is hypnotic and simple to read. As in the case of Gailly's "Un soir au club," Duras often repeats words and events, which is good for poetic effect and great for learning.

7. "Adolphe" by Benjamin Constant

Another classic, this is a sparse moral and psychological drama. The story follows a young man who develops a relationship with an older woman. Narrated in the first person, "Adolphe" explores all of the inner misgivings and woes of the main character, who is highly self-analytical. The prose is mostly limited to Adolphe's state of mind as well as his interactions with others, so the vocabulary and phrasing are efficient and fairly easy to follow despite the fact that the book was first published in 1816.

8. "Extension du domaine de la lutte" by Michel Houellebecq

Michel Houellebecq has become a highly controversial figure in France for writing characters with questionable social views and making offensive statements. Despite that, he's someone to be aware of if you have any interest in contemporary French culture and literature. He's a solid writer who can fill out your vocabulary on modern subjects such as dating, social politics, and the workplace. This is his first novel, and it encompasses and riffs on the dreariness of day-to-day societal existence in a way that comes across like Chuck Palahniuk's "Fight Club" as told by Bill Hicks, but with a lot more French.

9. "Moi qui n'ai pas connu les hommes" by Jacqueline Harpman

Narrated by a female character who was raised by a group of older women imprisoned in an undisclosed underground location, the reader is introduced to a world that is like this one but also distinctly different. The question of who the women's captors are and why they are being held makes the story a mystery as well. Creepy, imaginative and rife with examples of the first person plural passé simple, Harpman's novel is a dream for any speculative-fiction-loving French learner.

10. "Les Yeux jaunes des crocodiles" by Katherine Pancol

This is the longest and most difficult book on the list, but also one of the most useful for learning French. If you find it intimidating, work your way through a few others first and try coming back to it. Pancol writes with a light, sympathetic touch about members of a modern French family who follow separate ambitions and interests while still striving to love and support one another. The story has the appeal of an addictive television series that will keep you thinking about the characters when you're not reading and motivate you to get through the more difficult parts to find out what happens to them.
